

Computational simulation of wind forces on buildings

We are looking for one undergraduate student to participate in research that will integrate machine learning (ML) algorithms to predict and enhance the wind performance of buildings. The student will extract recently collected and publicly available wind tunnel data and execute multi-fidelity computational wind simulation models in the High-Performance Computer Lab (HiPCLab) of the Resilient Infrastructure & Disaster Response (RIDER) Center.

Contact: Dr. Pedro Fernández-Cabán

Email: plfernandez@eng.famu.fsu.edu